2. Chair of state; throne; post of authority; tribunal.
With due observance of thy goodly seat,
Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall supply Thy latest words. Shakep. Troilus and Cressida.
Thus we debate
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares fears. Shak. Coriolanus.
Whatever be the manner of the world's end, most certain it is an end it shall have, and as certain that then we shall appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every man may receive according to that which he hath done in his body, whether it be good or evil. Hakewill on Providence.
3. Mansion; residence; dwelling; abode.
It were enough in reason to succour with victuals, and other helps, a vast multitude, compelled by necessity to seek a new seat, or to direct them unto a country able to receive them. Raleigh.
O earth, how like to heav'n! if not prefer'd
Most justly, seat worthier of gods, as built
With second thoughts, reforming what was old! Milton.
In Alba he shall fix his royal seat;
And, born a king, a race of kings beget.
Has Winter caus'd thee, friend, to change thy seat,
And seek in Sabine air a warm retreat? Dryden.
The promis'd seat of empire shall again
Cover the mountain, and command the plain. Prior.
4. Situation; site.
The fittest and the easiest to be drawn
To our society, and to aid the war,
The rather for their seats, being next borderers
On Italy. Ben. Johnson's Catiline.
He that builds a fair house upon an ill seat, committeth himself to prison. Bacon.
A church by Strand-bridge, and two bishops houses, were pulled down to make a seat for his new building. Hayward.
It followeth now that we find out the seat of Eden; for in it was Paradise by God planted. Raleigh.
To SEAT. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To place on seats; to cause to sit down.
The guests were no sooner seated but they entered into a warm debate. Arbutnot.
2. To place in a post of authority, or place of distinction.
Thus high was king Richard seated. Shak. R. III.
Not Babylon,
Nor great Alcázar, such magnificence
Equal'd in all their glories to insurine
Belus or Serapis their gods, or seat
Their kings. Milton.
A spirit of envy or opposition makes mankind uneasy to see others of the same species seated above them in a fort of perfection. Pope.
3. To fix in any particular place or situation; to settle.
Should one family or one thousand hold possession of all the southern undiscovered continent, because they had seated themselves in Nova Guiana.
By no means build too near a great neighbour, which were, in truth, to be as unfortunately seated on the earth as Mercury is in the heavens; for the most part ever in combustion, or obscurity, under brighter beams than his own. Wotton.
4. To fix; to place firm.
Why do I yield to that suggestion,
Whose horrid image doth upfix my hair,
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature. Shak. Macbeth.
From their foundations loosening to and fro,
They pluck'd the seated hills. Milton.
The rock rush'd seaward with impetuous roar,
Ingulf'd, and to th' abyss the boaster bore. Pope.
SE'WARD. adv. [from sear, Saxon.] Towards the sea.
The right line drawn from the centre of a circle, cutting and meeting with another line called the tangent without it. Diell.
To SECE'DE. v. n. [from secedo, Latin.] To withdraw from fellowship in any affair.
SECE'DER. n. f. [from secede.] One who discovers his disapprobation of any proceedings by withdrawing himself.
To SECE'RI. v. a. [from secerere, Latin.] To separate finer from grosser matter; to make the separation of substances in the body.
Birds are commonly better meat than beasts, because their flesh doth assimilate more finely, and secereth more subtilly.
The pituite or mucus secered in the nose and windpipe, is not an excrementitious but a laudable humour, necessary for defending those parts, from which it is secered, from excoriations. Arbutnot.
SECE'SSION. n. f. [from secessio, Latin.]
1. The act of departing.
The accession of bodies upon, or secession thereof from the earth's surface, perturb not the equilibration of either hemisphere. Brown.
2. The act of withdrawing from councils or actions.

- SE'CLE. n. f. [from seculo, French; seculum Latin.] A century.
Of a man's age, part he lives in his father's life-time, and part after his son's birth; and thereupon it is wont to be said that three generations make one seculo, or hundred years in the genealogies. Hammond's Pract. Catech.
To SECL'UDE. v. a. [from secludo, Latin.] To confine from; to shut up apart; to exclude.
None is secluded from that function of any degree, state, or calling.
Some parts of knowledge God has thought fit to seclude from us, to fence them not only, as he did the interdicted tree, by precept and commination, but with difficulties and impossibilities. Decay of Virt.
The number of birds described may be near five hundred, and the number of fishes, secluding shell-fish, as many; but if the shell-fish be taken in, more than six times the number.
Inclose your tender plants in your conservatory, seclud- ing all entrance of cold.
Let eastern tyrants from the light of heaven
Seclude their bosom slaves. Thomson.
SE'COND. n. f. [from secundus, French; secundus, Latin.] It is observable that the English have no ordinal of two, as the Latins and the nations deriving from them have none of two. What the Latins call secundus, from sequi, the Saxons term ofter, or æftera.
1. The next in order to the first; the ordinal of two.
Sunk were their hearts with horror of the crime,
Nor needed to be warn'd a second time,
But bore each other back. Dryden.
2. Next in value or dignity; inferior.
I shall not speak superlatively of them, lest I be suspected of partiality; but this I may truly say, they are second to none in the Christian world. Lacen's Address to Flanders.
None I know
Second to me, or like, equal much less. Milton.
My eyes are still the same; each glance, each grace,
Keep their first lustre, and maintain their place,
Not second yet to any other face. Dryden.
Not these huge bolts, by which the giants slain,
Lay overthrown on the Phlegrean plain;
Twas of a lesser mould and lighter weight;
They call it thunder of a second rate. Addison.
By a sad train of miseries alone
Distinguish'd long, and second now to none, Pope.
Persons of second rate merit in their own country, like birds of passage, thrive here, and fly off when their employments are at an end. Swift.
SE'COND-HAND. n. f. Possession received from the first possessor.
SE'COND-HAND is sometimes used adjectively. Not original;
not primary.
Some men build so much upon authorities, they have but a second-hand or implicit knowledge. Locke.
They are too proud to cringe to second-hand favourites in a great family. Swift to Gop.
A SECOND-HAND. In imitation; in the second place or order; by transmission; not primarily; not originally.
They pelted them with satyrs and epigrams, which perhaps had been taken up at first only to make their court, and at second-hand to flatter those who had flattered their king. Temple.
In imitation of preachers at second-hand, I shall transcribe from Bruyere a piece of raillery. Tatler.
Spurious virtue in a maid;
A virtue but at second-hand. Swift.
SE'COND. n. f. [from secundus, French; from the adjective.]
1. One who accompanies another in a duel to direct or defend him.
Their seconds minister an oath,
Which was indifferent to them both,
That on their knightly faith and troth
No magic them supplied;
And fought them that they had no charms,
Wherewith to work each other's harms,
But came with simple open arms
To have their cautes tried. Drayton's Nymphid.
Their first encounters were very furious, till after some tall and bloodied they were parted by the seconds. Addison.
Personal brawls come in as seconds to furnish the dispute of opinion. Harris.
2. One who supports or maintains; a supporter; a maintainer.
He propounded the duke as a main cause of divers infirmities in the state, being sure enough of seconds after the first onset. Harris.
Courage, when it is only a second to injustice, and falls on without provocation, is a disadvantage to a character. Cicero.
3. A second minute, the second division of an hour by sixty; the sixtieth part of a minute.
Four flames of an equal magnitude will be kept alive the space of sixteen second minutes, though one of these flames alone, in the same vessel, will not last above twenty-five or at most thirty seconds. Harris's Metaph.

- Sounds move above 1140 English feet in a second minute of time, and in seven or eight minutes of time about 100 English miles. Locke.
To SE'COND. v. a. [from secundo, Fr. secundo, Lat. from the noun.]
1. To support; to forward; to assist; to come in after the act as a maintainer.
The authors of the former opinion were perfectly seconded by other wittier and better learned, who being loth that the form of church polity, which they fought to bring in, should be otherwise than in the highest degree accounted of, took first an exception against the difference between church polity and matters of necessity to salvation. Hooker.
Though we here fall down,
We have supplies to second our attempt;
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them. Shak. Henry VI.
I to be the power of Israel's God
Avow, and challenge Dag-n to the test,
Offering to combat thee his champion bold,
With th' utmost of his godhead seconded. Milton.
Familiar Ovid tender thoughts infuses,
And nature second all his soft desires. Rescramon.
If in company you offer something for a jest, and no body
second you in your laughter, you may condemn their taste;
but in the mean time, you make a very indifferent figure. Swift.
In human work, though labour'd on with pain,
A thousand movements scarce one purpose gain;
In God's, one single can its ends produce,
Yet serves to second too some other use. Pope.
2. To follow in the next place.
You'll me permit
To second this wish. Shakespeare.
Having formerly discur'd of a marital voyage, I think it not impertinent to second the same with some necessary relations concerning the royal navy. Raleigh.
He saw his guileful act
By Eve, though all unwitting, seconded
Upon her husband. Milton's Paradise Lost.
Sin is usually second with sin; and a man seldom commits one sin to please, but he commits another to defend himself.
SE'COND SIBT. n. f. The power of seeing things future, or things distant; supposed inherent in some of the Scottish illanders.
As he was going out to steal a sheep, he was seized with a fit of second sight; the face of the country presented him with a wide prospect of new scenes, which he had never seen before. Adison's Fables.
SE'COND SIGHT. adj. [from second sight.] Having the second sight.
Sawney was descended of an ancient family, renowned for their skill in prognosticks: most of his ancestors were second sight, and his mother but narrowly escaped for a witch. Add.
SE'CONDARILY. adv. [from secundarius.] In the second degree; in the second order; not primarily; not originally; not in the first intention.
These atoms make the wind primarily tend downwards, though other accidental causes impel them secondarily to a flowing motion. Digby.
He contended that temples are erected, and festivals kept, to the honour of saints, at least secondarily. Stillin fleet.
It is primarily generated out of the effusion of melancolick blood, or secondarily out of the dregs and remainder of a phlegmonous or cedematick tumour. Varney.
SE'CONDARINESS. n. f. [from secundary.] The state of being secondary.
That which is peculiar and discriminative, must be taken from the primatives and secondariness of the perception. Narr.
SE'CONDARY. adj. [from secundarius, Latin.]
1. Not primary; not of the first intention; not of the first rate; next to the first.
Two are the radical differences: the secondary differences are as four. Bacon's Natural History.
Wherever there is moral right on the one hand, no se- condary right can discharge it. Le Esfrange.
Gravitation is the powerful cement which holds together the magnificent structure of the world, which stretcheth the North over the empty space, and hangeth the earth upon nothing, to transfer the words of Job from the first and real cause to the secondary. Bentley.
If the system had been fortuitously formed by the convening matter of a chaos, how is it conceivable that all the planets, both primary and secondary, should revolve the same way from the West to the East, and that in the same plane? Bentley.
2. Acting by transmission or delegation.
That we were form'd then, say'st thou? and the work
Of secondary hands, by talk transfer'd
From father to his son? Milton's Paradise Lost, b. v.
As in a watch's fine machine,
Though many artful springs are seen,
The added movements which declare
How full the moon, how old the year,
Derive their secondary power
From that which simply points the hour. Prior.

SEC

3. A secondary fever is that which arises after a crisis, or the discharge of some morbid matter, as after the declension of the small pox or measles. Quincy.
SE'CONDARY. n. f. [from the adjective.] A delegate; a deputy.
SE'CO DIV. adv. [from secundus.] In the second place.
First she hath disobey'd the law, and secondly trespassed against her husband. Ecclesi. xxiii. 23.
First, metals are more durable than plants; and secondly,
they are more solid and hard. Bacon.
The house of commons in Ireland, and, secondly, the privy council, addressed his majesty against these half-pence. Swift.
SE'CONDARY. n. f. [from secundus and rate.]
1. The second order in dignity or value.
They call it thunder of the secondrate. Addison's Ovid.
2. It is sometimes used adjectively, one of the second order. A colloquial license.
He was not then a secondrate champion, as they would have him, who think fortitude the first virtue in a hero. Dryden.
SE'CRECY. n. f. [from secretus.]
1. Privacy; state of being hidden.
That's not suddenly to be perform'd,
But with advice and silent secrecy. Shak. Henry VI.
The lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open as his queen. Shakel. II. VIII.
in nature's book of infinite secrecy.
A little can I read. Shakel. Ant. and Cleopatra.
2. Solitude; retirement.
I thou in thy secrecy, although alone,
Pest with thyself accompany'd, seek'st not Social communication. Milton's Paradise Lost.
There is no such thing as perfect secrecy, to encourage a rational mind to the perpetration of any base action; for a man must first extinguish and put out the great light within him, his conscience; he must get away from himself, and shake off the thousand witnesses which he always carries about him, before he can be alone. South's Sermons.
3. Forbearance of discovery.
It is not with publick as with private prayer: in this rather secrecy is commanded than outward shew; whereas that being the publick act of a whole society, requireth accordingly more care to be had of external appearance. Hooker.
4. Fidelity to a secret; taciturnity inviolate; close silence.
SE'CRETE. adj. [from secretus, French; secretus, Latin.]
1. Kept hidden; not revealed; concealed; private.
The secret things belong unto the Lord our God; but those things which are revealed belong unto us. Deutr. xxix. 29.
2. Retired; private; unseen.
Thou open'st wisdom's way,
And giv'st access, though secret the retire: Milton.
And I perhaps am secret.
3. Faithful to a secret entrusted.
Secret Romans, that have spoke the word,
And will not pALTER? Shakel. Julius Caesar.
4. Unknown; not discovered: as, a secret remedy.
5. Privy; obscene.
SE'CRETE. n. f. [from secretus, French; secretum, Latin.]
1. Something studiously hidden.
Infected minds
To their dear pillows will discharge their secrets. Shakel.
There is no secret that they can hide from thee. Ezek. xxviii.
We not to explore the secrets ask
Of his eternal empire. Milton.
2. A thing unknown; something not yet discovered.
All blest secrets,
All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth. Shakel. King Lear.
All secrets of the deep, all nature's works. Milton.
The Romans seem not to have known the secret of paper-credit. Arbutnot.
3. Privacy; secrecy.
Broad eaten in secret is pleasant. Prov. ix. 17.
In secret, riding through the air she comes. Milton.
To SE'CRET. v. a. [from the noun.] To keep private.
Great care is to be used of the clerks of the council, for the secreting of their consultations. Bacon's Advice to Villiers.
SE'CRETARIAT. n. f. [from secretaire, Fr. from secretary.] The office of a secretary.
SE'CRETARY. n. f. [from secretaire, Fr. secretarius, low Latin.] One entrusted with the management of business; one who writes for another.
Call Gardiner to me, my new secretary. Shakel.
That which is most of all profitable is acquaintance with the secreta, and employed men of ambassadors. Bacon.
Cottington was secretary to the prince. Clarendon.
To SE'CRETE. v. a. [from secretus, Latin.]
1. To put aside; to hide.
2. [In the animal economy.] To secrete; to separate.
SE'CRETION. n. f. [from secretus, Latin.]
1. That part of the animal economy that consists in separating the various fluids of the body.
2. The fluid secreted.
SE'CRETIOUS. adj. [from secretus, Latin.] Parted by animal secretion.
